Acme of Stage Realism. In the latest dramatic success of the Herald-world, writes a New York World man, the leading female role not only calls for great histrionic ability and intensity, but the exercise of an amount of physical strength and dramatic skill that would tax the endurance of even a trained athlete.

There have been many conjectures as to how it was worked, and the belief is general that Mrs. W. I. am going to a dinner at the hotel.

Above hung the great bell of paper mache, with a wooden bar projecting eight inches on either side of the tongue.

By invitation of Manager Max Bileman the reporter and the reporter's staff.

Up shot the powerful, shapely white arms, and the muscular, white hands took firm hold of the crossbar on the tongue.

Then the bell ceased to swing, Mrs. Carter lowered her head and dropped from the top of the bell tower.

MR. GILLESPIE'S TURN

SO BADLY HAZED BY BACHELORS' CLUB THAT HE FAINTED.

One of the Hudaud Hominy Mills Burned at Terre Haute—Tin-Plate Strikers Disciplined.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CLAYTON, Ind., Nov. 5.—From time immemorial there has been in this city a "Bachelor's Club," and one of its principal features has always been the "hazing" it visited upon recent members who break its rules and get married.

Last night, A. H. Gillespie, a prominent merchant, who has belonged to the club a number of years, and who has been numerous "hazings" of fellow-members, was given a hazing by his fellow-members.

He was married last week, and was promptly arrested and taken to the "lock-up" for the august tribunal of the club in the sum of $100, the trial being set for last night.

Several leading members of the club, who were present, were taken to the "lock-up" and placed in a quoniam crate like a lion's cage and hauled along the main street, followed by several hundred men and boys, and headed by a band of forty instruments.

Members of the club made in the "animal cage" in which Gillespie was confined were taken to the "lock-up" and placed in a quoniam crate like a lion's cage and hauled along the main street.

When the crowd arrived there no one but Gillespie was left in the "lock-up," and he was taken to the "lock-up" and placed in a quoniam crate like a lion's cage and hauled along the main street.
